

Citation: Contributors (2022).
Lea 11: pp. 525-529. doi: <https://doi.org/10.13128/LEA-1824-484x-14160>.

Contributors

Livia Bellardini (<livia.bellardini@uniroma3.it>) is a PhD student in Anglo American Literature at the University of Roma Tre. Her interests range from lyric studies, feminist writing and poetics, to Caribbean notions of relationality. Her MA thesis on Claudia Rankine's Nothing in Nature Is Private was awarded the 2021 edition of the "Agostino Lombardo" prize from the Italian Association of American Studies (AISNA), of which she is a member. She was recently awarded a Dissertation Grant from Schlesinger Library (Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study at Harvard University).

Ginevra Bianchini (<bianchig@tcd.ie>) received a Bachelor's degree in Foreign Languages and Literatures in 2017 from the University of Bologna, and went on to receive a Masters' degree in Modern, Postcolonial and Comparative Literatures at the same institution in 2020. Her current research project focuses on the intersectional and interdisciplinary representation of rape culture in North America and the UK.

Gabriele Camilleri (<gabriele.camilleri@unifi.it>) is a first-year Ph.D. student in Japanese Linguistics at the University of Florence, where he also obtained his Bachelor's in Languages, Literatures and Intercultural Studies and his Master's in Languages and Cultures of Ancient and Modern East. He is currently a MEXT Research Student at the University of Osaka, working on a project about Japanese translations of Italian "virtual dialects". His research interests include sociolinguistics, translation theory, natural language processing and machine translation.

Nicoletta Caputo (<nicoletta.caputo@unipi.it>) is Associate Professor of English Literature at the University of Pisa. She has published articles and a volume on Tudor drama; a monograph on Angela Carter's Nights at the Circus; essays on Shakespeare, on nineteenth-century stage history, on Romantic fiction and on contemporary English theatre and fiction. Her most recent volume is Richard III as a Romantic Icon (2018).

Miriam Castorina (<miriam.castorina@unifi.it>) graduated from Sapienza University in Rome in 2008 with a PhD in History and Civilization of East Asia. She is currently a Research Fellow at the University of Florence. Chinese travel literature and history of China-Italy cultural contacts are her primary research interests.

Elisabetta Cecconi (<elisabetta.cecconi@unifi.it>) is Assistant Professor of English Language at the University of Florence. She is the author of The Language of Defendants in the 17th-century English Courtroom (2012). Her research interests focus on 17th- and 18th-century news discourse and propaganda in the British and American press and on English historical courtroom discourse.

Edoardo Checcucci (<edoardo.checcucci@unitn.it>) is enrolled in the PhD program in Forms of Cultural Exchange at the University of Trento. His research interests are mainly focused on migration and postmigration literature in Norway.

Diego Cucinelli (<diego.cucinelli@unifi.it>) received his PhD in History and Civilization of East Asia in 2013 at the University of Rome La Sapienza (Modern and Contemporary Japanese Literature) and he teaches Japanese Language and Culture at the University of Florence. His main research interests are Japanese demonology (yōkaigaku) and the Fantastique in Japanese Literature. He focused his studies on modern and contemporary novelists such as Kuroiwa Ruikō, Uchida Hyakken, Miyamoto Yuriko, Edogawa Ranpo, Umezaki Haruo, Murakami Haruki and Kyōgoku Natsuhiko.

Lena Dal Pozzo (<lena.dalpozzo@unifi.it>) holds a PhD in Cognitive Sciences from the University of Siena. At present she works as Finnish language instructor and lecturer of Finno-Ugric languages at the University of Florence and holds the national scientific qualification for associate professor. Her research interests include L2 acquisition, bilingual acquisition, L2 theoretical implications to language teaching, Finnish and Italian syntax.

Emma de Beus (<eedebeus@gmail.com>) has degrees in Theatre, English, and Shakespeare from Columbia University and The University of Birmingham. She is currently enrolled as PhD candidate of studies on adaptation at Queen's University Belfast. She has a forthcoming article related to these studies published in Humanities.

Annalisa Federici (<annalisa.federici@uniroma3.it>) is Assistant Professor of English Language and Translation at Roma Tre University. Her main research areas are literary modernism, formal and stylistic aspects in fiction, the relationship between language and psychological processes, as well as periodical and reception studies. She has published monographs and essays on Joyce, Woolf, and other modernist authors, often in a comparative perspective.

Gala Maria Follaco (<gfollaco@unior.it>) is Associate Professor of Japanese Studies at "L'Orientale" University of Naples. Her research focuses on Japanese modern literature. She has written extensively on Nagai Kafū, Higuchi Ichiyō, and on the representation of Tokyo in literature.

Tina Maraucci (<tina.maraucci@unifi.it>) is adjunct professor of Turkish Language at the University of Florence. She is the author of Leggere Istanbul, Memoria e lingua nella narrativa turca contemporanea (FUP 2020). She also published several contributions about Turkish contemporary novel in collective volumes and academic journals.

Maria Serena Marchesi (<mmamrchesi@unime.it>) is Associate Professor of English Literature at the Department of Ancient and Modern Civilizations (DICAM), University of Messina. She has published several monographs and essays about modernist theatre, gothic fiction, Victorian poetry and drama.

Stefania Mariotti (<stefania.mariotti@unifi.it>) is a PhD student in German Studies and a high-school teacher of German Language and Literature in Milan. Her previous research interests include Austrian literature between 1930 and 1970, and literary features of Ernst Bloch's works. Presently, she is analysing the work of Johann Peter Hebel (1760-1826) with a special focus on the Kalendergeschichten (Calendar Stories) as a key part of the Volkskalender "Der Rheinländische Hausfreund" (The Rhenish Family Friend).

Isabella Martini (<isabella.martini@unifi.it>) is full-time English Language instructor at the Department of Education, Languages, Intercultures, Literature and Psychology of the University of Florence. She is PhD in Foreign Literature (English concentration), earned at the University of Pisa. She has published on Anglo-Canadian short stories and on translation. She has recently focused her research activities on linguistics, specifically on corpus linguistics, media discourse, and historical English. She is also a member of the Corpora and Historical English Research Group (CHER; Florence Unit).

Elena Merlino (<elena.merlino@unifi.it>) completed in 2020 a Master's degree in Languages and Comparative Literatures at the University of Perugia. She is currently a PhD candidate in Comparative Languages, Literatures and Cultures at the University of Florence. Her research activities focus on the construction of space in a group of early Spanish Golden Age dramas.

Valentina Monateri (<valentina.monateri@unito.it>) is a PhD Candidate in Comparative Literature at the University of Turin. Her research project focuses on Cultural and Visual studies within the fin de siècle. She is interested in classical reception studies, visual studies and in comparative methods. She published her research in a collection on the classical reception in Shakespeare: "Metamorphoses of the two kings' two bodies. Ovidian echoes in Richard III and Richard II" (2021). She has a forthcoming article on visual studies in Madame de Staël's novel Corinne or Italy.

Daniela Moro (<daniela.moro@unito.it>) received her Master's degree from Waseda University in Tokyo and her Ph.D. from Ca' Foscari University of Venice, with a thesis on the works of Enchi Fumiko that was later published as a monograph. She is currently Associate Professor in Japanese Studies at the Department of Humanities of the University of Turin. She is interested in the relationship between Japanese literature and feminist, gender, and queer studies. In particular, she focuses on female writers working between the 1960s and the 1980s, but she also looks at contemporary writers.

Giuseppe Nori (<giuseppe.nori@unimc.it>) is Professor of American Literature and Language at the University of Macerata, Italy. He is the author of two books on Melville and of numerous essays on Modernism, Romanticism, and seventeenth-century literature. He has translated and edited works by Melville, Carlyle, Hawthorne, and Stephen Crane.

Cristian Pallone (<cristian.pallone@unibg.it>) teaches Japanese Language and Literature at Bergamo University. He edited a collection of four witty stories (sharebon) from eighteenth-century Japan (Atmosphere 2019) and the Italian translation of Hiraga Gennai's novel Nenashigusa (Aracne 2020). His research interests include Edo period (1603-1867) Japanese popular narrative and literary culture.

Chiara Francesca Pepe (<chiara@unex.es>) teaches Spanish Language at Secondary School “I.C. G. Barra” of Salerno (Italy). She is PhD student in Spanish/Italian Contrastive Linguistics at Extremadura University (Spain).

Simona Porro (<simonaagnese.porro@unifi.it>) is Assistant Professor of American Literature at the University of Florence. Her fields of research are Jewish-American literature, Jewish and Christian theology in the American literature of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and the representation of womanhood in nineteenth-century America.

Gi Taek Ryoo (<gtryoo@chungbuk.ac.kr>) is Professor of English at Chungbuk National University, Korea. He has published various articles in the field of poetry and science, ecopoetics, and posthumanism. He is particularly interested in the parallel development of poetry and science in the twentieth century.

Ikuko Sagiya (<ikuko.sagiya@unifi.it>) is Full Professor of Japanese Language and Literature at the University of Florence. Her research focuses mainly on classical Japanese Literature, with particular reference to poetry. She edited the Italian translation of Kokin Wakashū and Wakanrōeishū. Another line of study is dedicated to the fiction of the Heian period, especially on the Genji Monogatari.

Diego Salvadori (<diego.salvadori@unifi.it>) teaches Comparative Literature at the University of Florence. He specializes in ecocriticism, Gender Studies, autobiography, and literary archives. Among his recent publications are Camille Mallarmé. La scrittura senza volto (2011) and L'atlante di Claudio Magris (2022).

Christina Samson (<christina.samson@unifi.it>) is Associate Professor of English Language at the University of Florence. Her research focuses on historical and contemporary pragmatics, sociolinguistics and corpus linguistics integrated with discourse analysis of specialised corpora. She has founded the Corpora and Historical English Research group (CHER).

Ayşe Saraçgil (<ayse.saracgil@unifi.it>) is a full professor in Turkish Language and Literature at the University of Florence. Currently she is working on the analysis of the literary representations of gender, family, and social hierarchies in Turkey.

Cinzia Schiavini (<cinzia.schiavini@unimi.it>) is Associate Professor of American Literature at the University of Milan. She is the author of Strade d'America: L'autobiografia di viaggio statunitense contemporanea (2011) and Leggere Twain (2014). She has published essays on nineteenth-century American literature (Herman Melville, Mark Twain), nature and travel writing, and life writing (William Least Heat-Moon, Jonathan Raban, David Foster Wallace). Her current research is focused on contemporary Arab-American theatre and culture, and the 9/11 novel and its transnational turn.

Inmaculada Solis Garcia (<inmaculada.solis@unifi.it>) is Full Professor of Spanish Language and Translation at the University of Florence (Italy). The current focus of her research activity is Spanish Linguistics, Cross-cultural Pragmatics and Didactics of Multilingualism.

Aleksandra Wenta (<aleksandra.wenta@unifi.it>) is a researcher in Indology and Tibetology at Forlilpsi, University of Florence. She authored the monograph Dancing in the Sky of Consciousness: The Aesthetics of Power in Medieval Cidambaram as well as several scholarly articles and book chapters concerning Tantric traditions, Hinduism, and Tibetan Buddhism, and co-edited with Purushottama Bilimoria Emotions in Indian Thought-Systems (Routledge, 2015, repr. 2018, 2020).

